Dr. H. S. Coffin,
Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church,
New York City.

Dear Dr. Coffin:

Last year I wrote to you asking whether you would not come to Toronto and deliver one of the sermons to the University on Sunday morning. You replied that you were afraid that your other engagements would not permit you to do so. Meantime I have seen Professor Johnston Ross who promised to use his powers of persuasion upon you to reverse your judgment and to take a day for us.

May I also add as a further argument that we were counting on Professor Hugh Macintosh giving us a sermon last spring, but he has promised beforehand to preach in your church on the only day that was available?

For all these reasons will you not change your mind and take one of our vacant days, January 18, February 22, March 1, March 15, and March 22? I have written to Professor Hugh Black asking him to take one of these days also. If you can come will you kindly consult with him what day would be most convenient for both?

Yours sincerely,

President.
